

NEW CORSET TO BENEFIT HEALTH AND FIGURE.

It Reduces the Abdomen, and Beautifies the Figure, Yet It Is Very Hygienic and Strengthens a Woman Who Is Physically Weak.

THERE is a new corset in town which combines so many advantages that the physician and the dressmaker unite in smiling upon it with approval. The recently invented self-reducing corset supports and at the same time reduces the abdomen in a hygienic way. It enables the wearer to have a good figure and in cases of physical weakness it is a positive relief. The average abdominal corset, in its effort to reduce the figure, presses the flesh down so that it forms an ungraceful ridge below the corset line and also forces the weight of the abdomen upon the internal organs, to the physical injury of the wearer.

This new corset obviates just these two serious difficulties. By the peculiar manner in which it is made it lets the stomach rest in a hollow and at the same time it reduces it in size.

It is an excellent corset for the portly woman whose figure has been spoiled by overindulgence in late suppers and lack of exercise and also for all women and girls who are forced to stand much on their feet.

Here is the secret of the corset's beneficial effect: Just under the waist line is a series of plates which to the casual observer at first are invisible. These plates start from nothing, grow gradually larger and then diminish again in size until at the bottom of the corset they end in nothing.

This corset is about three inches longer from the waist line to the bottom than the average corset, and the arrangement of plates allows the stomach to rest in a hollow. The shape of the corset and the way the plates are inserted form a support to the abdomen underneath. The plates open according to the size of the abdomen.

From each side of the corset comes a strap, made with brass rivet holes. These straps have a downward tendency and follow the outline of the form. They can be adjusted to any size of abdomen and are so arranged that they raise the weight of the stomach at the same time that they reduce it in size.

In putting on the corset hook the strap at the right side first and then the one at the left; then lace the corset to suit the figure.

Another apparent advantage of this corset is that the manufacturers claim that its bones and steels never cut through the material.

The corset made in French coutil costs but $2.50, which is surely another of its novel and good points, for heretofore the abdominal corset has always been an expensive addition to the feminine wardrobe. This corset was shown to Dr. Egbert C. Gurnsey, editor of the Medical Times, and one of the best authorities in the city on hygienic dress for women. After a careful study of the peculiarities of the corset Dr. Gurnsey said:

"Yes, I heartily approve of this corset. It has all the advantages of an abdominal support I have ever seen. One of the greatest objections, from a woman's point of view, to the usual abdominal supporter is that it adds to the size of the waist and hips, while this corset reduces them. The harm which the ordinary tightly laced corset has done to female health is past reckoning."

HAIR GROWER AND SCALP CLEANER

Stand pre-eminently at the head of all hair and scalp preparations. More than 3,000,000 bottles have been used with satisfactory results in all cases when directions were followed—in some cases the results have been phenomenal, as the following letters bear witness:

Acquired this Phenomenal Growth in Four Years.

SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS:

Dear Ladies:—A little over four years ago my hair began falling out, and of course I was very much frightened for I should lose it all. I consulted a famous druggist, and he recommended the Seven Sutherland Sisters' Hair Wash and Grower. It not only stopped my hair from falling out, but it has promoted its growth to the enormous length of six feet, or 72 inches. It is of a rich dark auburn, very fluffy and wavy and very thick.

Yours respectfully,

(Miss) F. A. YOUNG.

75 Mohawk St., Utica, N. Y.

After Two Years Miss Britt's Hair Measures 65 Inches.

SUTHERLAND SISTERS:

Respected Ladies:—It gives me great pleasure to state for the benefit of the public, those who may be afflicted with diseased scalp or falling out of the hair, that I have a beautiful head of hair, 65 inches in length. I cheerfully recommend the above Hair and Scalp Cleaner as the best and most reliable remedy now in use. I remain yours with respect,

(Miss) M. A. BRITT.

HOW KARL DECKER RESCUED MISS CISNEROS FOR THE JOURNAL.

"The opening isn't large enough," she sobbed.

"The devil it isn't!" growled Hernandez. "Good men have gone to hell through a smaller opening. Come out."

In response she thrust her head between the bars and drew her body partly after. In a moment she was out and she could easily pass through, and she looked up into our faces with a smile such as the devout may wear in sight of Paradise, but seldom is it given any man to see such a gleam upon the face of woman.

By this time the fever of hurry was in all our veins. I quickly grasped Evangelina about the waist and lifted her through the bars. In a moment she was out upon the roof and was bursting into a joyous cry of freedom when I clasped my hand over her mouth, and, picking her up in my arms, carried her quickly across the azotea to where the ladder lay. Here no time was lost in leaving the jail roof. Hernandez lightly stepped across the swaying ladder and stood upon the parapet to receive her as she came across.

Without the slightest trace of fear, Evangelina climbed over the parapet and down upon the ladder. I reached far out and steadied her until she was started well upon her trip across. Then as I released her hand she ran quickly across, as though a solid ground, bending slightly forward, her arms outstretched in the effort to keep her balance. As she reached the parapet Hernandez caught her in his arms and lifted her to the roof.

"¡Mia zapatos!" she cried as her feet touched the cold tiles of the roof. "¡Deme mis zapatos!"

She was not given her shoes at this time, however. We had spent every moment in the broad, white glare of the moonlight that we intended to spend and felt an animal-like desire to get into the darkness. The ladder was drawn quickly back upon the roof and left lying there, together with the three hinged boards which were to have been used to form a platform across the ladder for Miss Cisneros, but which were not used. Although none of us suspected it at the time, a Smith & Wesson revolver, almost as large as a Spanish field piece, was left lying on the roof.

Our party quickly assembled in the main room of the house on the floor below, and quick preparations were made for getting away.

For about ten seconds we lapsed into lunacy. We three men danced by grotesque silence, poked each other in the ribs, evinced like colts in a pasture. The girl's big brown eyes were like saucers with amazement. She could not make out what manner of madmen were these three Americans, with their disgusting beards flying all awry, who capered like Harlequins. Presently she, too, caught the spirit of suspense ended, and joined in our wild momentary dance with a discreet step or two.

Having thus relieved ourselves and expressed our contempt for everything Spanish, we dropped quickly back to the seriousness of the situation.

We had the girl—had her clearly out of it and in our possession. Had outwitted the Spanish Government and accomplished the greatest journalistic feat in the history of newspaper making, and were clearly over the water-jump; but there were other burdens. Within five minutes after helping Evangelina out of the window we were ready to leave O'Farrell No. 1. Hernandez started first, as he was to drive the carriage. Silently they slipped out of the house, and we softly closed the door and waited. An hour seemed to elapse, and we heard no sound; then suddenly from Eglido street came a wild clatter, and the staccato pounding of iron against cobbles, as the carriage dashed wildly away. We had not lost our nerve by any means at this time, but we were possessed of a feverish desire to get away as quickly as possible. Leaving the candle burning upon the tinajero and our household goods in unseemly disarray, we quit our house in O'Farrell street, never to enter it again till Cuba shall be free. Our furniture we shall never see again, for the Havana vandals fell upon it next day and broke it to bits and carried it to all parts of the city as souvenirs of what will long be regarded as one of the most interesting events of the war.

The news dispatches have told the rest—the escape of Miss Cisneros on the Seneca and a day or two later my own escape on the Panama, and the rapidly evolving events of the past week have become newspaper history by this time.

KARL DECKER.

A Reliable Klondike Book.

One of the most readable as well as reliable works on the new gold fields, "Klondike, the Land of Gold," a 200-page book by Charles Frederick Stansbury, which comes from the press of F. Tennyson Neely. In this work the author has redeemed the promise of the title page, which embodies: Practical information of every description concerning the new gold fields, what they are and how to reach them; a short history of Alaska; a synopsis of the personal testimony of miners who have been on the ground; a digest of the mining laws of the United States and Canada; the latest authentic maps and illustrations; a review of the gold rushes of the world, together with a chapter on gold and its victims.

After reading Mr. Stansbury's book it is difficult to decide whether the Alaskan gold fields are alluring or repellent, but the reader is impressed with the fact that the truth is presented with absolute impartiality. Not the least important part of the book is the digest of the mining laws of Canada and the United States, which renders it a practical handbook on the subject of great value to miners and would-be prospectors. Although the writer has confined himself strictly to facts, parts of the work are as fascinating as a novel.

WHO WILL WED A PRINCESS?

A Future Maori Queen Will Pay a White Husband $35,000 a Year.

TONOMARU will some time be Queen of the Maoris. She does not care so much for the throne or the emoluments thereof, because she is very rich, as the Maori wealth goes.

What Tonomaruu wants is a husband. She has been searching for the right sort of man for several years, but somehow her heart is still unsatisfied.

She advertised for a spouse in the newspapers several months ago, stating just what she wanted, but up to the present time there has been no applicant or supplicant for her hand.

This seems all the more remarkable when it is considered that Tonomaruu is a beauty.

Nobody else in all Maoriland has such a beautiful lineament pattern on her face. The aborigines come miles to see her face, and visitors to the antipodes are urged not to miss the opportunity of beholding the wonderful Princess Tonomaruu.

She is the daughter of Paul, King of the Maori, and, as before stated, will some time inherit the throne.

Tonomaruu also has a very lovely disposition. She is even willing to get up first in the morning and to build the fires whenever fires may be needed.

There is a legend among the white people who visit Maoriland, however, that a diet of missionary was at one time very popular with certain ancestors of Tonomaruu, and that there are various legends in their possession which would make a bridegroom uneasy.

One of these legends is said to consist of a necklace of dried human fingers. Another is a chapter of missionary teeth.

Just think of it! With every tender embrace the happy bridegroom would feel the digits of dead men claving at his neck, and the molars of the murdered missionaries clattering about his brow.

Such lures and penalties are likely to make most men stop and consider before embarking on a life journey.

Worst of all, to would-be bridegrooms, the Maori Princess is as black as a blind alley on a stormy night.

In addition to casting away her long, triple-jointed name for that of Smith, or Jones, or Green, Tonomaruu also desires to be known as Mary—simple and sweet Mary, of time-honored fame and story.

Here is a description of herself from her own pen. You can judge for yourself as to her education. Any one can see that, for a Maori girl, she expresses herself with remarkable clearness:

"Take away my fortune and my title," says Tonomaruu, "and I am an ugly Maori girl, black as night, but well educated. My money might as well be spent in procuring a white husband. I realize that the man I select may not marry me for love but for money.

"I will let him spend $35,000 a year, but he must never let me know that he is ashamed of his wife. You shall have my photograph, and if you meet a man you think I would like, show it to him and tell him what I have said."

What a chance this is for $35,000 a year! The bridegroom can escort his sable wife around to quitting bees and church socials and then spend $300 or $400 in forgetting it, until the next time.

He ought to be enabled to put up at least $15,000 a year, and at the end of, say five years, he might possibly get a divorce on the grounds of incompatibility of color.

Tonomaruu realizes that in the effort East there might be a question of caste, but she is not daunted thereat and may yet visit America in search of a husband.

War May Now Be Waged by Anaesthetics.

A Russian chemist is reported by the British and Colonial Druggist to have discovered a substance with most powerful anesthetic properties, which exerts its influence over a wide area even when greatly diluted with air.

It is proposed to determine whether it will not be possible to enclose the anesthetic in bombs, which could be thrown into an enemy's ranks and there exploded, thus anesthetizing large bodies of troops and rendering them an easy prey. This would give a new application to the phrase, "putting one's adversary to sleep."
